Content of the Module	This course will deal with the two main aspects of hermeneutics: How do we understand? and, how do we interpret texts? It will explore different epistemological as well as various hermeneutical approaches. Particular attention will be given to more recent hermeneutical approaches. The course wants to assist the student to develop his own hermeneutical approach to Evangelical/Pentecostal provenience.
Learning Objectives	A. General Learning Objectives <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Understand and be able to explain the history of biblical interpretation. • Discuss and describe the hermeneutical approaches of the 1st century CE. • Identify key figures in biblical scholarship within the framework of hermeneutics and within the last several centuries and be able to outline and explain their hermeneutical approaches to Scripture. • To grasp and be able to analyze linguistic, sociological, and cultural aspects of an evangelical/Pentecostal hermeneutic. B. Specific Learning Objectives As a result of the activities and study in this course, students should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • assess, evaluate, and discuss different hermeneutical approaches in the context of biblical scholarship over the past several centuries (e.g., in the form of classroom presentations). • examine hermeneutical principles for a Pentecostal/Evangelical approach to hermeneutics and contrast them with other hermeneutical approaches. • gather and organize hermeneutical elements for a Pentecostal/Evangelical interpretive approach to Scripture. • construct one's own hermeneutical approach to Scripture, formulate it carefully, and conclude by classifying or evaluating it in light of other approaches.
Outline	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Introduction • How do we understand? • How do we exegete? • History of hermeneutics • Rabbinic hermeneutics • Jesus as Teacher • Pneumatic hermeneutics • Elements of Pentecostal Hermeneutics • Gospel and synoptic tradition

THEO 535 - Doctrine of the Holy Spirit

Teacher	Dr. S. Schumacher
Semester	Fall	Duration	8 Weeks
Frequency	Every three years
Credits	5 ECTS	Workload	150 Hours
Module format	Intensive
Applicability	The student will be assisted in establishing his/her own pneumatological outline of a biblical book and in constructing his/her own pneumatological approach, or pneumatology. In a final step, the student will bring the contours of such pneumatology in conversation with contemporary scholarship and ministry, engaging in a pneumatological discussion on the relevance of his/her pneumatology for the present and future.

Content of the Module	This course will deal with the doctrine of the Holy Spirit (pneumatology) and will first focus on the history of the treatment of the Spirit from 30 AD until today. A particular focus will then be given to the development of the doctrine of the Spirit among scholarship within the last 150 years before the class directs its attention to the emergence of Pentecostal pneumatology. Here, various past and contemporary pneumatological approaches among early Pentecostals and contemporary Pentecostal scholars will be highlighted and discussed.
Learning Objectives	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • To discuss the history of the doctrine of the Holy Spirit and to locate specific time periods, changes, and shifts in church history in relation to the establishment of pneumatology. • To analyze and compare various pneumatological approaches within the last 120 years. • Formulate your own pneumatological approach based on a particular book of the Bible. • To demonstrate a basic scriptural understanding of the nature and functions of the Spirit of God. • To appraise contemporary topics and issues regarding pneumatology (i.e. in contemporary ecclesiology) and to evaluate the impact of the current Pentecostal scholarship on contemporary ministry.

Outline	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Definition of pneumatology • Pneumatological discussions and approaches over the last centuries • North American Pentecostal movements • Pentecostal outline of pneumatology of the Torah • Contemporary Pentecostal contexts (1990-today) • Constructing a pneumatology based on a particular book of the Old or New Testament • Applying pneumatology to contemporary Pentecostal ministry and scholarship. • Appraise the characteristics of pneumatology of the particular book chosen and compare and contrast them with the contemporary ecclesiology of Terry Cross.

THEO 594 - Pastoral Theology in the 21st Century

Teacher	Dr. C. Simpson
Semester	Fall	Duration	8 Weeks
Frequency	Every three years
Credits	5 ECTS	Workload	150 Hours
Module format	Intensive
Applicability	In Europe and North America a different set of challenges are facing pastors and denominations. In many lands, church attendance is declining and Sunday has become a day for leisure activities. This course seeks to explore various responses to these challenges e.g. new forms of church, postmodern ethics and morality and biblical illiteracy.

Content of the Module	This course will consider the specific challenges facing the Church in the 21 st Century, particularly in Western Europe and the USA. In particular the serious decline in attendance and membership of many denominations. The cultural and sociological changes which may have produced this and how the churches have been responding, sometimes in some unusual ways e.g. the emerging churches or ‘Fresh Expressions’. Further challenges have arisen in the areas of ethics and morality, biblical illiteracy and departures from orthodox beliefs. In each case pastors are on the front line and are having to respond to new situations without the necessary support of an appropriate pastoral theology.

Learning Objectives	A. General This course seeks to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • assess the overall impact of a reduction in church attendance • describe the theological trends that are emerging from an increasingly unchurched populace • investigate the social and cultural reasons for a decline in church going • demonstrate the variety of responses to the current situation • suggest future implications for ethics and morality in Pastoral Theology • compare and contrast various proposed methods of reversing the decline in church attendance • analyze the cause of biblical illiteracy and consequent unorthodox doctrines B. Specific As a result of the study and activities of this course, the student should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • explain how the decline in church attendance and the causes of this affect Pastoral Theology, its thinking and practice • identify the sociological and cultural changes which have impacted traditional church patterns • compare and contrast various models of emerging churches and "Fresh Expressions" • analyze potential challenges for future change in the Pentecostal and Charismatic churches • appraise the influence of IT on current church going • provide a theological reflection on the role of the Pastor in an changing world • write an article suitable for publication in a Pentecostal or Charismatic magazine, which highlights the challenges of church going in the 21st century and what other denominations are doing about this
Outline	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The Challenge of Postmodernism on Pastoral Theology • The decline of church attendance in Western Europe and the USA • A Post-Christian reality? • Emerging churches • Fresh expressions • Missional church • New monasticism • Biblical illiteracy • Orthodox, unorthodox doctrines and heresy • Pastoral ethics and morality • Communication - use of IT and computer technology • Commitment - a 21st Century problem • Future trends

Content of the Module	This course will focus on the writings of Martin Luther, placing his thought within the broader historical and cultural context of late medieval Catholicism and the Renaissance. Luther’s early theological writings and the Reformation that they helped to spawn will be examined along with his later theological writings. Given the importance of Luther’s legacy on Protestantism, it is important for graduate students to have a comprehensive and in-depth understanding of the various aspects of his thought.

Learning Objectives	A. General Learning Objectives This course seeks to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Introduce students to the study of the Reformation period in general and the study of Martin Luther in particular. • Offer an overview of the life and theology of Martin Luther. • Interpret the various genres of theological writing from Martin Luther by reading, analyzing, and contrasting them with other writers from the time period (both Catholic and Protestant). • Describe the historical background to Luther's Reformation 'discovery.' • Examine the way that theological opposition and debate toward Luther's ideas helped to shape the way Luther's own theology developed. • Offer an overview of the intellectual and spiritual climate of the late medieval period and the influence it held on Luther's thought. • Evaluate the legacy of Luther's theology on Protestantism and Lutheranism. • Compare and contrast the theology of Luther with that of other Reformers. • Develop a model (interpretive 'grid') for reading Luther's writings. • Demonstrate the importance of various aspects of Luther's doctrine on the church today. B. Specific Behavioral Objectives As a result of the activities and study in this course, the student should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Demonstrate an understanding of the late medieval background of Luther's Reformation discovery and the development of his theology. • Outline an overview of Luther's life and theology (for this letter, particularly from a timeline of his writings). • Construct an interpretive model for reading Luther's theological writings. • Identify the ways that theological opposition to Luther's thought shaped Luther's own theology. • Evaluate the legacy of Luther's theology. • Compare and contrast Luther's theology with that of other Reformers. • Assess the value of Luther's thoughts for the church today.

Content of the Module	This course is designed for students to conclude their graduate program in theological studies by writing a thesis that provides evidence of the ability to do independent research and compile it in the form required by the faculty of graduate studies in Pentecostal-Charismatic Theology.

Learning Objectives

A. General Learning Objectives

This course seeks to:

- To foster the continued development of research and writing skills in the area of biblical and theological studies.
- To contribute to the body of biblical and theological knowledge and literature.
- To assist the student in developing a personal hermeneutical and exegetical position to be used in acquiring a comprehensive understanding of Old and New Testament content.
- To develop an understanding of the philosophical foundations for theological reflection.
- To prepare the student for the teaching enterprise, whether in the educational ministry of the church or in the context of the academy at large.
- To prepare the student to engage in more advanced degrees, including doctoral studies.
- To integrate faith and learning in such a way as to develop the individual in mind and spirit in order to enhance the students own spiritual development and also that of the body of Christ.

B. Specific Behavioral Objectives

As a result of the activities and study in this course, the student should be able to:

- Analyze biblical and theological writings at a level commensurate with other graduate students in religion programs.
- Produce written work that portrays a knowledge of primary and secondary literature in the discipline.
- Compare and contrast the various hermeneutical options for biblical exegesis.
- Demonstrate an understanding of the philosophical foundations for biblical and theological reflection.
- Provide evidence of analytical and critical skills which are prerequisites to further graduate studies in the bible or theology.
- Demonstrate a rudimentary capacity for a specified language for biblical or theological research where required (primarily Greek, Hebrew, or German).
- Integrate Pentecostal faith and experience with doctrinal reflection.
- Articulate the thought of contemporary theologians.

Outline	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • January: In conversation with the chosen reader, the student will prepare a formal thesis proposal to be submitted to the MABTS Committee for its consideration. This proposal must contain: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> I. a succinct thesis statement; II. a precise statement of the problem the thesis will tackle; III. an outline detailing the structure of the thesis argumentation; After the faculty reader has agreed to the proposal, s/he will present the formal thesis proposal to the MABTS Committee, who will approve the proposal as is or approve with the required emendation. Once the proposal has been approved by the MAPCT committee the student must enroll in the thesis writing course. • February: An outline bibliography that must have a minimum of 35 pertinent primary and secondary sources for a biblical/theological thesis. • March: The student will write his/her thesis under the direction of the faculty reader, and will submit a completed chapter directly to that reader, who will evaluate it and return it with suggestions and corrections. • April: The thesis rough draft should be submitted and the reader will outline corrections and make suggestions for improvement. • May: A final version of your complete thesis must be submitted to the tutor by May 31st. After the thesis has been passed by the tutor a faculty reader will also grade it. • June: By June 30th the student will complete any remaining edits/corrections and submit two bound copies to ETS, with an electronic copy sent to Lee.

Content of the Module	Can we know God? If so, how? We can believe in God, but is such belief justified? How to apply the principles of epistemology to knowledge of God and belief in God? What would make belief in God justified true belief? Discover the theory of knowledge and the nature of the mind's connection to the world. One of the oldest sub-disciplines of the western philosophical tradition, epistemology asks the big, basic questions: what is it to know reality? What is truth or fact? How is meaning generated? We will also question if there is a "Pentecostal proprium" for theological epistemology which could enrich at least Protestantism.
Learning Objectives	This course seeks to <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • give a presentation of the importance of epistemology for theology as such • clarify terms and definitions • analyze preconditions of theological knowledge • consider the impact of selected people, who are important for the development of an useful epistemology • provide a detailed study of epistemology in church practice • reflect the possible contribution the Pentecostal movement could give for a sufficient epistemology for doing biblical theology • discuss conspiracy theories and the importance of a biblical orthodox epistemology

Content of the Module	This course will consider a theology of missions from a Pentecostal/Charismatic perspective. The course will specifically explore the missional understanding of the Trinitarian God and His Church. The role of the Holy Spirit in mission is a major feature of Pentecostal theology of mission. Therefore, the course will specifically address such topics as the role glossolalia/xenolalia, signs and wonders (power evangelism), spiritual gifts, and prophetic evangelism. Because Early Pentecostals had an eschatological urgency, the course will seek to develop a contemporary theology on the topic. Since mission happens in context, a theological understanding of culture from a Pentecostal perspective will also be explored. Finally, the course will consider a Pentecostal theology of missions and revival, which has missiological and eschatological implications.
Learning Objectives	A.
